CU SERVICE NETWORK ANNOUNCES NEW EDUCATIONAL RESOURCE

Lakewood, CO (April 4, 2018) – CU Service Network is very excited to announce the launch of its new education resource for credit unions, called “The CU Service Network University” (The University, for short). The CUSO has been building the online hub for years, compiling and creating content for credit unions of all sizes.

With a majority of the resources completely free, CU Service Network hopes to create a place where credit unions can learn on their terms, whether it be in short, easily-scanned articles, or in in-depth whitepapers. It is part of their vision to be credit unions’ “number one resource.”

Included in The University are a variety of areas for credit unions to explore:

- 1. E-Series: These are series of short, easy-to-read articles on a certain topic, sent to your inbox each week. They are designed to be quickly scanned when you have 5 minutes here or there.
- 2. Seminars: In-person events, each one addressing a pressing credit union topic. Some of the best credit union speakers in the country are guests at our University seminars, which are collaborative, informal, and encourage discussion.
- 3. Whitepapers: In-depth and very detailed papers on specific credit unions services.
- 4. Resource Library: Your one-stop-shop for credit union resources around the web. Included are articles on IT, Marketing, Accounting, Executive Strategy, and small credit union issues.

Doug Burke, President/CEO of CU Service Network commented, “We simply wanted a place where credit unions could come to learn, which was both accessible and friendly. Credit union people wear many hats and do not often have the time to scour dozens of websites for education. We want to see the credit union industry thrive and education is key to that.”
